

Zhou receives Chaney Family Early Faculty Scholar Award

The purpose of this award is to recognize a Purdue College of Pharmacy faculty member in the first ten years of their career who has demonstrated outstanding scholarship.

Innovation and impact are the primary desired characteristics of the discovery and research program developed by a faculty member nominated for this award. Indicators or measures of the quality and impact of the research include:

- Impact of the scholarship on society, industry, and the disciplines of pharmacy and pharmaceutical sciences
- National and international awards, including be elected as fellow
- National recognition (e.g., invited talks, editorships, etc.)
- Interdisciplinary activities
- Scholarly productivity (e.g., publications, citation records, patents, published design work) and their quality and innovation

- Research input (e.g., level of success in generating resources, partnerships, collaborations)

For more information about Dr. Zhou's research, please visit <https://www.ipph.purdue.edu/faculty/zhou659>

News Date: Thursday, May 10, 2018